(Introductory biography adapted and written by LWV)

I-Ching is a designer of the built environment with a Master in Architecture from Harvard University's Graduate School of Design and a sociology degree from the University of Michigan. She will use her skills and experiences to advocate for beautiful, inclusive, and sustainable growth in Winchester.

I-Ching hails from the Midwest but has been in the Boston area for the last twenty years. She has worked on the design of cities, campuses, buildings, and interiors in Boston, San Francisco, Chicago, and New York. She has an independent architectural design practice and also works as a realtor with a local firm.

Dedicated to building sustainably with the protection of the natural environment, she is an accredited professional in LEED, the building industry's roadmap for reducing environmental impact. As an avid gardener, she is also pursuing a horticulture and design certificate with Native Plant Trust, a conservation organization that promotes healthy, biologically diverse landscapes.

I-Ching volunteers in her children's Winchester public school and looks forward to representing and supporting the people of the town in thoughtful change.
